Strange Thankfulness

You might think this is horrible, but I just heard a woman I know who was grateful that a person died. I was not surprised, knowing her. She was terrible! The worst part was that the guy who died was killed trying to save her.

The guy knew her and loved her deeply. There was a time when she didn't care about him at all. Later, as she got to know him, she fell in love with him. But it's still hard to believe she's thankful that he died.

The way he died was horrible! You've heard of lynchings of people who claim to be a certain kind of person; this was kind of like that. It was slow and painful.

If you can believe it, she tells a lot of people about it. It's almost like she's boasting about what happened. She even almost smiles at times when she talks about his death.

I guess I'm thankful too!

Galatians 6:14a

As for me, may I never boast about anything except the cross of our Lord Jesus.... (NLT)
